Mr. James J. Rowley, Director
U. S. Sec et Service
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Rowley:

As I wrote you at the time, I was unable to review the Oswald film you gave or loaned to the National Archives pursuant to my letter of December 9. Because this film is so much clearer than any other copies I have seen or than the copy of the edited version of all frames sequences permitted me by HSCA, I do hope you will arrange to have it available for others who may wish to examine it. And I am thankful for this partial accommodation to my request.

The FBI report I cited to you also refers to certain still pictures made available to the Secret Service at that time. This is confirmed by the FBI photographer, who still recalls this. As I have written you earlier, only some of these still pictures are in the Warren Commission files at the Archives. They should all be there, available to everyone.

Because response to my letter took almost two months, may I ask that, prior to my viewing these stills or copies of them transferred, you permit me to examine them in your offices? This will take but a few moments. If I want any copies and if you or the Archives should then require written permission from me, I would have time to get this mail to me after it is being accomplished. I plan no publication for any of these pictures. If I did, the FBI permission to me would require their written assent, in any event. Their permission, the conditions under which they supplied a copy of what remains in their files, is for study only and that is my only present purpose.

The identification of the 40-seconds of film you supplied goes into my chief interest. It says, specifically, that there were two men helping Oswald. To the best of my knowledge, the subsequent FBI investigation disclosed the name of but a single one. If the Secret Service, which, I regret, was inhibited in its New Orleans work almost immediately, developed any light on this, I would welcome it. At the same time, - I have here my own investigation, have spoken to those you were precluded from interviewing (I select this word with care), and, if your have continuing interest, will be happy to let you know what I have learned and the confirmation I have developed. Two of these interviews are tape recorded, with the permission of those interviewed. If you are interested, you may wish and/or copy this tape, with the sole restriction preservation of my rights and confidence. I am in my files proof this was once a matter of great interest to you.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
